

ECLIPS DEPOT

The Altech Eclipse Depot is a unique freestanding soapstone wood stove from Altech's popular Eclipse series. Thanks in part to its oval shape, the Eclipse Depot has a stylish, playful appearance. The wood compartment only adds to this.

On top of that, the curved glass window guarantees a lovely view of the fire. When it comes to its output, the Eclipse is highly suitable for smaller and mid-sized rooms. Both its top and rear can be connected to the flue.

The absence of a control panel and the integrated levers add a sense of peace, another sign that this series was designed with great attention to detail.

PRODUCT BESCHRIJVING

Efficient wood burning with the Eclips

To make sure the heat produced during combustion is optimally used, Altech designed a unique flue channel system for the Eclips series.

When wood is burned in the stove, the flue gases are collected and guided into a 2-metre flue gas channel. As a result, the flue gases have more time to transfer their heat to the soapstone. This is one of the reasons why the Eclips can achieve such high yields. Thanks to this technique, the Eclips also requires less wood.

The Eclips is available in different varieties

The Eclips series consists of 4 different models. All models have the same base, but feature different details in their appearance. For example, the Eclips can be equipped with legs or a wood compartment, and can even be upgraded with an oven at the top.

The Altech Eclips Depot does not have legs. Instead, it features a wood compartment. This is not just convenient for firewood storage, but it also adds to the Eclips' stature. The Eclips Depot is available in natural soapstone with anthracite cast iron or in uniform black soapstone with black cast iron.
